OTTAWA, July 12.—The Masonic Grand Lodge to-day elected Daniel Story Grand Master.

TORONTO, July 12.—Three thousand Orangemen paraded the streets to-day and afterwards assembled at the Provincial Exhibition grounds where games were held. Everything passed off quietly. At Montreal there was no celebration of any kind held, not even a flag up. The members of the society meet in the lodge rooms to-night.

LONDON, July 12.—The number of deaths by the floods is now put at forty, although the difficulty experienced in finding the bodies renders it somewhat difficult to get the actual loss.

THE SCENE LAST NIGHT.
The city last night was in darkness, as the gas was "drowned out," and it is feared also that the water supply will be exhausted, as the high water has interfered with the pumping apparatus. The pumping house has been carried away, but the machinery is not injured.

GREAT DISTRESS.
At the informal meeting held last night, $7,000 were subscribed to relieve the distress which followed the terrible disaster. A distress fund is recorded of two maiden ladies named Wright who lived in a cottage beside Kensington bridge. They were both rescued, but one of them went mad shortly afterwards. A member of the Lucy family aged 22, who attempted to escape with two younger members of the family on his back, was struck and knocked down by a floating tree. All three perished. Whole families are destitute, but every effort is being made to relieve present wants.

THE SCENE IN LONDON. West is a horrible scene. The streets are blocked with wrecked buildings, principally dwelling houses, and it is with the greatest difficulty that a passage can be made even by foot passengers. Hundreds of persons will off yesterday morning are penniless today.

NO MORE BODIES HAVE BEEN RECOVERED, but many who are missing have not yet turned up. The property destroyed is highly valued at half a million of dollars.

EUROPEAN.
GETTING BETTER.
LONDON, July 12.—A correspondent at Paris had an interview with Prime Minister Ferry. He declared the excitement in England over the Tamate affair must have arisen from a misconception of the feelings of French Cabinet, whose most serious wish was to cultivate cordial relations with England. Mr. Ferry believed the occurrence at Tamate had been exaggerated. The deceased British Consul, he said, was known to be anti French in his attitude. The idea that any French Admiral should insult the British flag Mon. Ferry declared to be preposterous, and he asserted that Admiral Ferrer could not have ventured to adopt the extraordinary course attributed to him.

WAGER $500.00

To Whom it May Concern.

During the thunderstorm in August, 1882, the County of Middlesex, Ont., alone suffered to the extent of from $50,000 to $75,000 in the destruction of dwellings, barns and buildings. Not one of the structures consumed was furnished with rods from the Lightning Rod Company of London, although there are thousands and thousands of feet of our rods erected upon the farm houses and barns in Middlesex Co., and over 10,000 rods erected within the city limits alone during the past two years, the statements of a few acres to the contrary notwithstanding. The Globe Company, in order to show that in the goods manufactured and sold by them, are prepared to place the sum of $500.00 in the hands of His Worship the Mayor (or any other responsible citizen in London) as a similar amount of deposited by any person or persons who can prove, that a building provided with suitable rods from the Globe Company has been struck during either of the years thunderstorms which have visited Western Ontario. The money to be divided between different charitable institutions in Brandon. Orders by mail promptly attended to.

GUN-SHOT WOUNDS.

Some Curious Facts—Some Remarkable Escapes.

Marvelously fortunate escapes from gun-shot injuries have been recorded. Bullets have been known to rebound or glance off the skin, leaving only a dent, probably from the oblique direction in which they struck; a spent ball strikes a rib and drops out again, or carries in a portion of clothing before it, rendering it easy to withdraw. Sir Astley Cooper relates two extraordinary instances, in one of which a bullet moving with full velocity entered the side, and, coming in contact with a rib, was deflected from its course, and ran round under the skin to the opposite side of the body. In the other, the bullet struck one temple, passed over the head to the other, and never penetrated the skull at all.

The following case occurred in the practice of an eminent surgeon, whose name I was. A man was brought to him, who had shot himself in the side of the head with a pistol, with suicidal intent. He was said to have held the weapon only an inch or two from his ear, and the extensive burning and laceration of the skin bore evidence to the truth of the statement; there was a ragged bullet-hole; nevertheless, no fracture of the bone could be detected, and there was an entire absence of "head symptoms"—that is, those indications which point to some lesion of the brain. So he was put to bed and kept quiet, without any treatment at all beyond local applications, carefully washed the while for any untoward complications that might develop themselves. But nothing came of it, and in a week or two the man was nearly well. Then, for the first time, he complained of a pain and stiffness in the neck, which, being examined, showed signs of an impending abscess. The wound was opened in due season, when out dropped the bullet. Now here was this to be accounted for? At the side of the head is an arch of bone known technically as the zygoma; it is seen in the skulls of animals, and serves to preserve and strengthen the hinge of the jaw, as it were. The bullet, meeting the sharp upper edge of the zygoma—there was a mark on the bullet caused probably by the bone—was turned suddenly downward at right angles, and lodged in the thick muscles of the upper part of the cheek. But this would never have occurred if a great disproportion had not existed between the caliber of the pistol-barrel—said to be of cavalry blunderbuss—and the size of the ball, which allowed much of the powder's force to be expended harmlessly.

It is a well-known fact that bullets, even other metallic objects will occasionally remain impacted in the flesh for years, without giving rise to any irritation or annoyance. In a case which came under my notice in London several years since, a ball had undoubtedly passed into the chest, and is undoubtedly there to this day; yet the patient recovered without any bad symptoms, and is still alive and well.

Two German students, being in love with each other, but in any case in despair and wearied of the world, agreed to put an end to their troubles by shooting each other through the heart simultaneously. So much was gathered from a paper signed by both of them, found on their table, when the police, alarmed by the double explosion, broke into the room where they lay on the floor weltering in their blood, one a corpse and the other desperately wounded. But when the latter had recovered sufficiently to speak he emphatically denied the truth of the allegation that he had murdered his comrade, and stated that though he had signed the paper he had expected of his determination at the last moment; not so his friend, however, who, seeing both pistols, had shot him in the breast and killed himself afterward. A verdict of wilful murder was returned against him by a coroner's jury.

Things We Outgrow.

It is both the curse and the blessing of our American life that we are never quite content. We all expect to go somewhere before we die, and have a better time when we get there than we can have at home. The issue of our life is uncertain. We say we will work so long, and then we will enjoy ourselves, but we find it just as this day has expired. "When I was a boy," he said, "I wanted some taffy; it was a Sunday, I hadn't seen. When I was a man, I had a suitor, but I didn't want any taffy." —Robert Collier.

Straw Hat says he has killed two men with a gun, and his own hands, then the United States army must envy him.

Stopped the Proceedings.

"I came in to tell you that you might as well stop them proceedings in chancery for a bill of divorce," said a soft eyed thing about 27 years old, as she came into a Laramie lawyer's office.

"Decided to live together as man and wife again, hay?"

"No, not that. Not that. You see Obadiah strolled away to Leadville two years ago, and kind of give me and the kids the grand shake. Since then I've been rustling in my gentle, unobtrusive manner to make a stake. I've wrote to him occasionally whenever I had leisure, and kind of rounded him up for not chipping in with his assessment, but he never represented.

"That kind of irritated me, and I asked you last week to get me a divorce. If I paid all the assessments myself I thought 't would be no more than square to get all the dividends. But this morning I got news from Leadville that has changed my notion a little about the divorce."

"Sent you some money, did he?"

"No, not that. He didn't even write to me, but I got a paper with a big blue mark around a piece of it, which convey the intelligence that Obadiah was hung there on the 10th by request."

"It seems that he got to jumping lots and stealing horses between meals, and people got down on him. Then he salted a claim over on Buckskin, and sold it for $10,000 to a tender-foot from away down East."

"He made several flowery breaks like that, and the popular feeling seemed more or less turned against him. Several weeks ago Obadiah stole a pair of big mules from a man who belonged in Kokomo, and next night went back to get a neckyoke and monkey-wrench that belonged to the wagon, and happened to run into a passle of vigilantes lookin' for a job. They took Obadiah over to a tall, limber tree, and let him stand on a bronco pony plug under the lowest limb while they tied a clothesline around his windpipe."

"Obadiah told them that he wasn't much of a bare-back rider, and he didn't know whether he could do the trick or not. They slid the clothesline over the limb and hit the bronco a lick with a quirt."

"The bronco was a high-plug, and had been raised in luxury, so he got mad when they hit him and he lit out some. That left Obadiah in a good deal of suspense. He wiggled around a little and got embarrassed, and didn't seem to know what to do with his hands for a while. Then he became more calm and composed in his manner, and the crowd made a present of him to the coroner. I wrote to the authorities to send me his check book and a statement of Obadiah's bank account, and whatever you're out on this divorce hooraw will be all right, understand. I'd rather let the Almighty and the vigilantes fix up my law business than to die of old age waiting for chancery, anyhow. That's the kind of griet-stricken relic I am."
